

State Legislative Action on Presumption of Workers' Compensation Eligibility

* Over the last year, state legislatures have introduced bills seeking to establish presumptive eligibility for workers' compensation claims in response to the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak.

* This tracker focusses on the 2021 legislative session. You can access the 2020 legislative session tracker here.

* We will provide weekly updates documenting any relevant new bills and the current procedural posture of the existing legislation. This week's actions include:

- The Texas Senate passed a bill, HB 541, which would create a rebuttable presumption for compensation under Texas's workers' compensation law that a detention officer, corrections employee, firefighter, peace officer, or emergency medical technician who suffers from COVID-19 that results in death or total or partial disability is presumed to have contracted the virus during the course and scope of employment.

* Most states that have introduced legislation establishing presumptive eligibility for workers' compensation claims follow this general framework:

- Provides a presumption of compensability—that may be refuted by affirmative evidence—that a covered employee contracted COVID-19 during the course of employment;
- Defines the contours of who qualifies as an eligible employee (e.g., peace officers, health care providers, food service workers, etc.); and
- Clarifies the duration of the application of the provisions.

Not every state has followed this model and some states deviate in important respects (e.g., application to all future pandemics, etc.).

* If you operate in a state and notice that we have not included the most up-to-date legislative developments, please let us know.
